DR. SAM. C. STREMMEL DEAD

REVIEW OF HIS LIFE BY A BROTHER PHYSICIAN.

Born Near Gettysburg and Educated Here He Makes a Name For Himself in Illinois.

Dr. Samuel C. Stremmel, born near Gettysburg July 1863, died at his home at Macomb, Ill., in July of this year. News of his death only reached friends here a few days ago. Dr. Stremmel made a name in the medical profession in Illinois. He wrote out directions for his funeral services before his death, which were carried out as requested. Dr. Arthur Adams, a brother physician, complying with his friend's last request, prepared and read the following review of his life at the funeral.

In a comfortable little country cottage on the battlefield of Gettysburg on July 23rd, 1893, Samuel Calhoun Stremmel was born. His parents, George and Mary Brodbeck Stremmel, born and married in the county of York, Pennsylvania, had sometime before located here.

On the approach of the armies in June, 1863, the inhabitants had moved to the hills and after the armies had retired they returned, where twenty days after the smoke of battle had cleared away Dr. Stremmel first saw the light of day.

He attended the local school until 15 years of age, when he entered Gettysburg high school. One year later he entered and for two years attended Pennsylvania College. He taught for one year in Gettysburg and then came to Astoria, Ill., where he engaged in educational work, teaching schools in and about Astoria for three years.

On May 27, 1887, he was united in marriage with Miss Eliza Stremmel, who, with their son George, survives. In 1887 he went to Chicago and entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons, from which institution he was graduated with honors in 1891. He then came to Macomb, Ill., and on April 1, 1891, began the practice of his profession, and in the general practice he has been successful and has a large and increasing list of patients.

During this practice he saw the need for a hospital in Macomb, and in 1904, when an opportunity was presented whereby the Marietta Phelps Hospital could be secured for Macomb, he had the foresight to read its charters and to see enough in his own ability to manage and operate the same that he personally guaranteed its maintenance and support.

This was the first hospital in this part of the State. He was the pioneer here in anesthetic and surgical surgery and through his efforts and on his success was built the surgical reputation of Macomb.

During the same year he saw the necessity for a trained assistant and when the hospital was opened he organized "The Marietta Phelps Training School for Nurses," and has operated the same to this time. From this institution sixty-seven young women have gone out into this and surrounding communities. Sixty-seven young women, faithful, honest and true, scientifically trained to assist the physicians to relieve the pain and prolong the lives of the afflicted and to restore to health the sick and the injured. For these sixty-seven young women we owe him a deep debt of gratitude.

Professionally in diagnosis he was quick, a few pointed questions, a delicate touch and a diagnosis was made which careful observation and examinations seldom changed. As an operator he was rapid, yet careful and scientific. Should complications or the unexpected present itself during an operation, his decision was soon made and the work was as carefully and rapidly completed as though it had been planned previously. He was absolutely unselfish. Should a friend in the most extreme condition come to him, if there was the least show for surgical relief, he would forget himself and his surgical reputation and give the patient the benefit of an effort to save his life.

dren. He could soon win the confidence of children and had no trouble in treating them. They instinctively knew he was their friend and each morning as he went his rounds in the hospital they would wait for him with a smile.

He had a wonderful personality and one would not be with him long without recognizing it. He soon inspired one with confidence in his sincerity. He was generous almost to a fault, always willing to give of his work or his money to a worthy cause. He has been spoken of as "The poor man's friend." When a poor man came to him sick or with a sick wife or child his first thought was not of himself or his fee, but, rather, what can best be done to help him. The poor and unfortunate received the same prompt, careful and scientific treatment as his richest patients.

Many among our poor are sad to-day because they know that they have lost a true friend. He had a big, kind heart, a good word for everyone, harshness for none. He was loyal to his friends, and soon forgave and forgot an unkind word or deed from those who knew him not. There being no room in that generous soul of his for the memory of a wrong.

That is the kind of a man we have lost. We have lost the man, but not the memory.

Daniel S. Reynolds died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Harvey Hoffman, in Straban township, last Friday from apoplexy in his 70th year. For thirty years he lived on the Reynolds farm in Straban township near Granite, then moved to town and after his wife's death he has been living with his daughter. He was a school director in his township for a number of years and enjoyed the respect of all who knew him. The funeral was held on Sunday by Rev. P. R. Pontius with interment in the Evergreen Cemetery. He leaves a son and daughter, Irvin Reynolds, of Gettysburg, and Mrs. Hoffman.

Later she returned to Lancaster county where she resided until her death. She was a frequent visitor at the home of her brother, Peter Keady, of Orrstown, and with her sister, Kate Keady, at Fairfield. Her last visit to this section was made about five years ago. Until that time she performed all of her own household duties. Funeral services were held in the Reformed Church at Fairfield on Thursday morning.

Mrs. Eliza J. Frey, wife of Christian Frey, ended her life on last Friday by hanging in the barn. She had been suffering with despondency by reason of long continued ill health. Mr. Frey had been absent during the afternoon and upon his return and being unable to find his wife at the home of neighbors a search was made and body was found. Mr. and Mrs. Frey had no children living, and her husband is the only member of the immediate family surviving. She was aged 68 years, 7 months and 10 days. Funeral and interment was made on Monday in Evergreen Cemetery.

Going to the Fair?

The great Carlisle Fair at Carlisle, Sept. 23 to 27. The management is enthusiastic over the coming event and expect to have many interesting exhibits from the great war in France. A huge war flying machine is possibly an attraction and is to arrive under its own power. Every effort is being made to have this the greatest Fair of the year. Admission only twenty-five cents. Children under 12 years admitted free. Make up your mind now to go and see what the world is doing. You'll not be sorry you made the trip.

Maybe you were unable to buy a Liberty Bond; you wish at the time that you might. Thrift and War Savings Stamps are little bonds in small denominations; but they count wonderfully. Buy some and become a member of the big stay-at-home army that is helping to win the war.

Used Garments for Red Cross.

Adams county will have its share in the great collection of garments made in response to the appeal printed below. Each branch will have its place and time of collection. Last spring a similar appeal was answered by ten large cases from the county. It is expected greatly to exceed this contribution.

The Appeal.

Chairman Red Cross War Council, Washington, D. C.

The ten million imprisoned people in occupied Belgium and France are facing shame, suffering, disease and some of them dearth for lack of clothing this winter. They must be helped. I hope that the Red Cross will undertake a renewed campaign to obtain this clothing in America. It can come only from us. Your first campaign yielded magnificent results, bringing in fully 5,000 tons of clothing in good condition. But much more is needed if these war-ravaged people are to get through the winter in decency and safety. In the face of brutal coercion and spiritual suffering they remain splendidly courageous. This courage challenges our clarity. Let us match the courage of Belgium by the generosity of America.

Every kind of garment, for all ages and both sexes, is urgently needed. In addition, piece goods—light, warm cotton flannel and other kinds of cloth from which to make garments for new-born babies, ticking, sheeting, and blankets, woolen goods of any kind—and shoes of every size are asked for. Scrap leather is needed for repairing footwear.

Since the clothes will be subjected to the hardest kind of wear, only garments made of strong and durable materials should be sent. It is useless to offer to any afflicted population garments of flimsy material or gaudy coloring. Make the gifts practical.

Garments need not be in perfect condition. A hundred thousand destitute women in the occupied regions are eager to earn a small livelihood by repairing gift clothing and making new garments adapted to needs with which they are familiar.

Do Not Send

Garments of flimsy material or gaudy coloring, ball dresses, high heeled slippers, etc. Stiff hats, either men's or women's, straw, dress or derby. Anything containing rubber, raincoats, rubber boots, etc. Note—Rubber heels can easily be removed from shoes. Books, toys, soap, toilet articles. Notes or communications of any sort or description must positively not be sent.

Military Field Mass in the Valley.

On Sunday, Sept. 22nd, at 11:30 A. M. Father W. W. Whalen, pastor of St. Ignatius' Church, Buchanan Valley, will celebrate a Military Field Mass in the woods near the church. He will be assisted by soldiers from Camp Colt, Gettysburg. After the services a substantial dinner will be served for all. The day is in charge of the Knights of Columbus, and members of that order will come from Harrisburg, Lancaster, York, Chambersburg and other towns.

Hard to Beat.

Charles H. Shaner, of Cumberland township, presented to the Compiler on Wednesday a red beet that is surely one of the largest of the season. This beet, which Mr. Shaner raised in his garden, weighs five pounds and asserts it's right to claim the heavy-weight championship.

Fourth Teacher at Mt. Pleasant.

"That Seal Guarantees Congoleum Quality," —says the salesman, pointing to it on the rug.

"We are glad they put the Gold Seal where you can't help seeing it, because it protects both you and us.

"We recommend Congoleum Art-Rugs wherever a low-priced floor-covering is desired for there is nothing else that answers the purpose so well. First, it is sanitary and easy to keep clean. There is no burlap in a Congoleum Rug, so water won't hurt it. A damp mop will keep the colors clear and bright.

"Second, a Congoleum Rug is very durable. The surface is wear-resisting and absolutely sanitary. Then, too, it lies perfectly flat without any fastening.

"And remember, this Gold Seal which is on every genuine Congoleum Art-Rug, guarantees every good point I have told you about them.

"The most surprising thing about Congoleum Art-Rugs is their low price. Let us show you the many beautiful designs in our stock."

ARENDTSTVILLE.

Dr. Joseph Dunne and wife, of Springfield, Mass., and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ludwig, of Hanover, were recent visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Emory Orner's.

Aside from the country people coming in and returning from church services there were very few automobiles seen on our streets last Sunday. This shows that those who take long pleasure trips on Sunday heeded the request of the Government and are saving the gasoline for war purposes.

Mr. and Mrs. Otho M. Miller, of Rochelle, N. Y., are guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Miller, the former's parents.

Owing to the shortage of laboring men we see women driving two-horse teams loaded with peaches and apples going to the railroad station and the Biglerville cold storage plant. If many more of our men go to war some of our women folks will have to lay aside their fancy work and assist more in men's work.

PUBLIC SALE

This property lies about one-half mile off the road leading from Cashtown to Arendtville, known as the "Back Road," about midway between these two towns, and improved with a two story frame house, barn, chicken house, pig pen and other necessary buildings, having a good spring of water near the house. This property has an Apple Orchard on it in bearing condition of about 500 trees, of Baldwin, Lady Blush, Northern Spy, Ben Davis, York Imperial and Stayman Winesap, and at this time the crop is estimated at about 700 or 800 barrels of fine fruit. # The Opening Show and Sale of Autumn Coats and Suits Dresses Skirts Waists

Is Set for Monday, September 9th

The assortment is large. We planned it to meet every requirement of women who demand up-to-the minute styles combined with undeniable quality—who seek service rather than display. As such, ours is a thoroly representative stock, from which no worthy style-thought has been omitted.

Fortunately, makers with whom we have dealt for years were abundantly able to meet all our demands—they were as interested as ourselves in keeping up a reputation they had helped us to build.

We insisted on cloth-quality and exacted exceptional workmanship. Styles were abundant—but real old fashioned values were scarce.

Yet these makers had provided by advance orders for nearly adequate supplies for this season. With goods in stock they were able to undersell many of their rivals. Thus it happens that many prices are quite close to the old values which you must have thought were gone forever.

In every respect ours is a very remarkable showing—in point of variety, in point of real quality, in point of values which are not likely to be equalled anywhere.

DEMOCRATIC COMMITTEE

OF THE STATE ADOPTS GREAT PATRIOTIC PLATFORM.

The Committee Does Not Endorse Bonniwell as He Has Placed Himself Outside the Party.

The Democratic State Committee met at Harrisburg last Saturday to meet Judge Bonniwell in response to the request of the committee asking him to be there. Ninety of the 112 State committeemen were present.

Judge Bonniwell did not go to Harrisburg, but placed himself outside his party and its legal organization, and refused to answer the charges preferred by his own party committee, that he had become a candidate for Governor at the request of Liguorman Sinnott, a Republican, acting under direction of Senator Penrose. The only notice Bonniwell took of the charge was to issue privately a denunciation of Hon. A. Mitchell Palmer and Hon. Vance McCormick.

Mr. Davis, of the Resolution Committee, then presented resolutions which endorsed all other Democratic candidates but Bonniwell, which resolutions were adopted by a vote of 88 to 2. The resolutions were as follows:

"Whereas, at the last meeting of this committee, specific charges were made against the nominee for Governor on the Democratic ticket reflecting upon the methods employed to procure his nomination and upon his integrity as a candidate, and notice was formally given requesting him to answer said charges before this committee chosen by the Democratic voters of the State to represent the Democratic party, and

"Whereas, the said candidate has failed to appear before this committee to answer said charges but has persistently repudiated its authority and denied its powers, and has mailed to each member a statement purporting to be an answer to said charges, and upon careful consideration thereof and all the facts this committee finds that the charges so made are true, and

"Whereas, this committee believes that at this critical hour it is of vital importance to support our President by the election of candidates in sympathy with the Administration and by the presentation to the people of such party candidates as are manifestly loyal to the party and its principles:

"Now, be it resolved, that this committee pledges itself to the support of our candidates for Lieutenant Governor, for Secretary of Internal Affairs, for Congressmen-at-Large, for Congress, and for other State and local offices, and to the use of all honest and honorable means to procure their election to office."

Hon. Wm. H. Berry in supporting the resolutions said in part: "I will not participate in a campaign of defamation and personal abuse any further than to say that my personal contact with Hon. A. Mitchell Palmer and Vance McCormick make it impossible for me to believe the evil things that are said about them."

"They are not infallible, and like the rest of us, make mistakes, but I give them credit for altruistic motives, and certainly their discharge of the onerous duties that devolve upon them as State and National leaders of the party has been free of mistakes, and far superior to anything that I recall as preceding them."

Pure Blood

Is absolutely necessary to give the health that brings happiness, a good appetite, restful sleep, and makes you eager for life's duties. HOOD'S SARSAPARILLA makes pure blood and so creates this much-desired condition.

or to anything in sight that aspires to succeed them.

"In any event, assuming that Bonniwell's candidacy was spontaneous, and that Sinnott of Penrose had nothing to do with it, it is the height of presumption for Judge Bonniwell, who, as Governor, would have no proper influence upon the action of the Legislature on the amendment, and who was nominated on a wet platform, while J. Washington Logue, who would have the casting vote in case of a tie in the Legislature, and was nominated on a dry platform, to interpret the result as giving him the right to demand the resignation of Mr. Logue, and the retirement of every lively-loving Democrat in the organization to obscurity and oblivion while he takes a booze bath in the sanctuary of Democracy."

Hon. A. Mitchell Palmer reviewing the admissions made by Sinnott and others declared that they pointed to the truth of the statements he had made at the previous meeting of the committee. He concluded as follows:

"And I say another thing which is appropriate to be said at this time in this great hour of the country's emergency. I say another thing: That the organized liquor traffic of the country is a vicious interest because it has been unpatriotic; because it has been pro-German in its sympathies and its conduct. Why, you and I know perfectly well that it is around these great brewery organizations owned by rich men, almost all of them of German birth and sympathy, at least before we entered the war, that has grown up all the societies, all the organizations of this country intended to keep young German emigrants from becoming real American citizens. It is around the seangerfests and the seangerbunds and organizations of that kind, generally financed by the rich brewers, that the young Germans who come to America, are taught to remember first, the Fatherland, and second, America. You remember the exposure of the German Alliance, brought out first by Mr. Hulmes in Pittsburgh, and afterwards in Congress when the Senate of the United States revoked its charter because of its disloyal conduct. It was a German whisky alliance and everybody knows it. I know that these great interests have actually been willing to finance great newspapers for the purpose of spreading German propaganda and sentiments in this country."

"I tell you, gentlemen, it is time for us to wake up. Let us go forth as men for Country, for State, and for party. Let us say now to the people of Pennsylvania that we are clean, uncontrolled by any interest; and especially will we refuse to allow ourselves to be controlled, even indirectly, by the vicious liquor interests of the State and Nation through their champion, Boies Penrose."

Democratic Platform.

The State Committee then adopted the following platform amid cheers: The Democratic party in Pennsylvania, represented by the Democratic State Committee, presents to the people the following record of achievements and it declares the ensuing principles of government as the policy by which it is guided in order that those who approve of this record and these principles may participate actively in the government of the Commonwealth and of the country by supporting for public office candidates of the Democratic party in the State of Pennsylvania.

Endorsement of the President.

We ardently express our pride and confidence in the leadership of our President, Woodrow Wilson. In the most crucial period of the world's entire history he stands pre-eminent in foresight, comprehension, courage and initiative, the veritable field marshal of freedom in the prevention of despotism from dominating the earth and in the preservation of liberty and popular government to its people. His extraordinary ability to voice the aspirations and purposes of democracy, his clear, definite view of correct finality of the war, and his swift and unswerving course to that end have made him the chieftain of the twenty-eight nations fighting for justice and humanity and the trustee of the hopes of their millions and millions of people.

Endorsement of Congress.

We also declare our admiration of the prompt and patriotic action of Congress in accurately solving the great problems of statesmanship continually confronting it. Tested, as no previous body of legislators in the history of the republic have been tested, by the magnitude, variety and novelty of the momentous questions before them, these nestors of the nation steadily have held us on a high and wisely chosen course through the channels of unprecedented war.

Leadership in the War.

Destiny has placed upon the Democratic party the obligation of leadership in the greatest war ever waged by the nation or by the world. When the conflict burst upon us it was the sagacious President of the United States, Woodrow Wilson, who, piercing the mazes and disguises with which the German empire sought to conceal the true purpose of their onslaught against the peace of the world, first announced to mankind that the concerted attack of Teutonicism was not to punish Serbia but that in reality it represented the assault of arrogant autocracy determined to destroy democracy; that it was feudalism, moderately organized, endeavoring to re-establish itself with the emperor of Germany as the overlord of the entire world. Consolidating with singular clarity the motives which united the twenty-eight nations in the greatest alliance of all times, in the grand army of all ages, Woodrow Wilson, uttered the martial maxim of democracy by which this mighty host in arms is guided, and by which this epochal struggle in future ages will be comprehended. "We seek the reign of law, based upon the consent of the governed and sustained by the organized opinion of mankind."

The Democratic party thus personified in the President of the United States, in his associates in executive offices, and in the wise and vigorous majority in Congress, has met the obligation of leadership in this national and world-wide crisis with a genius, force and skill unequalled by any party in the history of nations at war.

Under their fast and faultless direction one million and eight hundred thousand of our soldiers are overseas, another million is crossing, and many millions are being mobilized, while our navy has been so expanded that to-day in ships and personnel it is a magnificent armada, the second sea power in the world. War, thus insolently and suddenly flung upon us, a quiet peaceful people unused to the methods and temper of warfare, has been met by the most marvellous, scientific mobilization of men and materials in the martial history of the world.

To our soldiers and sailors we send congratulations and proud and fervent greetings. They have justified manifold the great confidence which we, prompted by tradition, have placed in their valor. They have met the troops of Teutonicism and reversed the progress of the war. The advance of battle to-day is swiftly towards Berlin. The fierce fighting spirit of our soldiers and sailors is not animated by a lust of carnage but it is fired by the realization that they are exacting retribution for the unspeakable cruelties perpetrated by German arms, German airplanes and German submarines, and by the realization that they are waging the final war in the age-long struggle of mankind for justice and freedom. We pledge to them our united support in every effort to the accomplishment of victory and we promise them in the days of their glorious homecoming such rewards that not one warrior among them will have just cause to say that his country is ungrateful.

Unfortunately the war has not yet been won. The people of Pennsylvania, in company with their fellow citizens throughout the Union, stand face to face with the supreme test of American citizenship. The success of our army and navy calls for the aid of every man and woman in this Commonwealth, all giving bountifully of their fortune, their wisdom and their work. Woodrow Wilson, the guiding genius of all must be encouraged, strengthened and enthused for the stupendous task still before him. We appeal therefore to the voters of Pennsylvania to fortify the President of the United States by electing throughout the State the Democratic candidates for Congress in order that the executive and the legislative branches of government may present an organized, co-operating, effective combination of power, statesmanship thus matching our soldiery in swiftness and harmony of action and winning the war, speedily and conclusively, under Woodrow Wilson.

Democracy's Labor Record.

In a country of magnificent resources the most important resource is productive labor. The Democratic party has kept faith with those who toil. Through the initiative of Woodrow Wilson and the strong, straightforward action of Democratic Congresses more reforms for labor have been accomplished than have characterized any previous administrative period in the legislative annals of the republic. Not only have a group of progressive labor laws been written upon the statute books but salutary measures have been put in force by the executive officials of the Government. The record of the Republican party in this respect has been a vast morass of pledges preached in party platforms but bleak and barren of performances. The Democratic party has more than fulfilled every pledge. It has meted out substantial economic justice. It not only has improved the conditions under which labor works but it has bettered the conditions under which labor lives. In proof thereof we present the actual record of the Democratic party as guardians of the interests of American labor.

To the Democratic party labor owes:

1. The establishment of the period of eight hours as a standard working day;
2. The creation of the United States Board of Mediation and Conciliation for the adjustment of great railway and industrial disputes without recourse to strikes or lock-outs;
3. The prevention of the abuse of writs of injunction;
4. The adoption of a comprehensive compensation law in order that workmen and their families promptly and automatically may be compensated for accident and death resulting from occupation;
5. The prohibition of human labor from being classed as a commodity or article of commerce;
6. The restriction of punishments for alleged contempt of court, and the extension thereof of trial by jury in all cases where the alleged contempt did not occur in the immediate presence of the court;
7. The specific enumeration of the acts which labor legally may commit in furtherance of its contention in a labor dispute;
8. The prohibition of funds, appropriated for prosecution of violations of anti-trust laws, from being used to prosecute laborers for acts committed in furtherance of their legitimate functions;
9. The establishment of new safety and experimental stations for the Bureau of Mines in order to enable it to extend its work of safeguarding miners;
10. The extension of Federal boiler inspection so as to apply also to locomotive engines and tenders;
11. The bestowal upon sailors of the right to terminate their employment because of unsatisfactory wages or conditions when their vessel is in a safe port;
12. The exclusion from inter-state commerce of all articles produced by the labor of children. This law has been declared unconstitutional but the Democratic party is pledged to the re-enactment of its principle in constitutional form.

Democracy's Pledge to Labor.

Notwithstanding this record of achievements the program of the Democratic party in behalf of labor is not complete. We champion the creation of a state commission to study the subject of wages in order that a minimum wage may be ordained by law in all industries. We believe that there should be a special extension in the laws of the Commonwealth for the protection of the women and minors now forced by war to perform work previously done by men, and whose presence in the ranks of toil is destined to remain long after the war has terminated.

We commend the system in operation in many enterprises throughout the State by which labor, in accordance with a system of bonuses, participates in the profits of production and we declare this principle to be a mighty stride in the promotion of economic justice and industrial peace. We applaud the appointment of practical representatives of labor upon the industrial councils and commissions of the nation and we declare that similar appointments should characterize like bodies in the State of Pennsylvania.

We favor the amendment of the Pennsylvania compensation law in order that the operation of the act may be more swift in behalf of the beneficiary, that the percentage of compensation may be increased, and that its provisions may be extended to all disability which arises from occupational diseases.

To such a program of legislation for labor in Pennsylvania we pledge the support of the Democratic members of the State Legislature and upon this pledge we particularly ask for the support of the voters of the State for all Democratic candidates for State offices.

Political Equality for Women.

We hold that the question involved in the general political enfranchisement of women no longer is debatable. Demonstration in many States throughout the Union has supplemented speculation and proven the soundness of the proposition that women by natural right are entitled to vote and to hold public office equally with men.

In rectifying this principle we further recognize the supreme services rendered by women in this war. They not only have accomplished efficiently the work which in previous conflicts has been performed by women but courageously they have taken places in activities however dangerous, laborious and severe, and there toiling have discharged tasks hitherto considered exclusively the work of men. Such achievements intensify the demand that the fictitious disabilities imposed upon women by law shall be removed.

Reform in Education.

We direct, betimes, the attention of the public to the coming of a new era in public education. At the close of the war Pennsylvania will be called upon to provide educational facilities in accordance with new conditions. A world must be rebuilt. The builders to a large extent are the boys and girls now in school who will reach maturity during the reconstruction period. In numbers they exceed our armies. Their work is equally important. Their training and equipment can not be less. We advocate for them and for our returning soldiers the establishment of trade and vocational schools as an extension of our public school system so that the youth of Pennsylvania hereafter may not be sent into life with the meagre and scattered knowledge represented by a common and high school education but that they may be given besides a specific and thorough training in a practical, profitable and useful occupation.

We recommend laws which will organize systematically and sensibly the professions of public teaching in order that teachers may be appointed of virtue of scholastic and executive qualifications, that they may advance upon merit, that they may be adequately paid, secure in their tenure of position and that they may be pensioned when disabled by age.

Finally, we pledge our support of liberal appropriations to our normal schools and to our colleges and universities whose extraordinary services through their highly specialized men and women this war has made singularly conspicuous and whose presence in abundance the country will need after the war more than ever before.

Constitutional Revision.

Forty-five years have elapsed since the adoption of the present constitution of Pennsylvania. During this long and eventful period many conditions that confronted its framers have disappeared, many new methods of government have been devised, and in some respects the intentions sought in our constitution actually have been defeated by the changes wrought by time. Evidence of the need of a revision is to be found in the group of proposed amendments annually submitted to the voters. We declare in favor of the convention in order that our basic body of law may be so revised that the people may enjoy modern privileges which now are denied to them through the operation of an obsolete state constitution.

Home Rule for Cities.

We protest against the unnecessary restrictions imposed upon the government of our cities by prohibitions in their charters and in the statutes of the Commonwealth. The modern theory of sound municipal government contemplates home rule to the utmost extent compatible with orderly and uniform state government. We demand, therefore, that the restrictions which unjustifiably hamper and cripple the administration of the cities of Pennsylvania shall be removed.

Mine Cave-Ins.

The Democratic party vigorously sustains the people residing in the coal sections of the State in their demand that the State government shall extend to them its full engineering force to prevent further loss of property and jeopardy of life by the sinking of the surface of the earth above improperly and inadequately constructed mines.

Improved Country Highways.

The amazing growth of traffic along public highways due to the expansion of agriculture calls for the extension of the State's highway system so that all farming communities may be connected with their

Hon. Andrew R. Brodbeck Candidate for Congress

Extract From Mr. Root's Address at the Annual Meeting of the National Security League Held May 8th, 1918.

"We are going to elect a Congress this coming fall. There is one great single predominant qualification for an election to that Congress, and that is a loyal heart. (Applause).

"I don't care whether a man is a Democrat or a Republican or a Progressive or a Socialist or a Prohibitionist, or whatnot, he must have a loyal heart, or it is treason to send him to Congress. (Applause). There are probably from twenty to thirty Congressional districts in this country where there is a loyal majority but where there is so large a disloyal minority that a division of the loyal majority may let a pro-German in. In every one of those districts, Democrats and Republicans and all loyal men should get together, and agree upon the loyal man of one party or the other who is the surest to carry the district, and all unite on him without regard to party. (Applause).

"Any man who would not accept the idea and follow it, I would want to live a hundred years to vote and work against. (Applause). Human nature has not changed. There are going to be parties, going to be politics hereafter; but now they are subordinate, they are unimportant. The one thing only is to win the war, and put men in Congress who will represent the driving power of the American people; the driving power that is behind Congress, that is behind the Administration, and that, God grant, may make itself felt behind the men who are putting over contracts and lingering on the road to victory. (Applause).

"The great thing is to make Germany feel that the hundred millions of America are going, as one man, to beat them (applause), to make every American feel that all the rest of the hundred millions are with him in his mightiest efforts to beat the German. (Applause)."

Reflect. Apply the words of this great American to the situation in this Congressional District. The man to elect without regard to party is the man who has been representing the driving power of the American people.—Brodbeck markets by improved public roads.

Floods and Waterways.

The need for the greater utilization of the State's water resources becoming more and more apparent through the exigencies of the war, we pledge our efforts to the creation of and the carrying out of plans for the complete regulation of rivers in the State for the prevention of floods and as an aid to transportation.

Conclusion.

Upon this statement of pledged redeemed by the enactment of corresponding laws and upon this enumeration of principles which we are striving to have reduced to law the Democratic party of Pennsylvania calls upon the voters of the Commonwealth to sustain the administration of Woodrow Wilson and to secure a similar administration in this State by electing to office candidates of the Democratic party throughout the Commonwealth.

"Mains-Made"

By IMES MACDONALD

(Copyright, 1914, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Within five minutes of the same time, at least five mornings out of the week, Westly Mains reached the corner on Fifth avenue and turned Washington squareward. His punctuality was so noticeable that the little maid in the kitchen of the great house at the corner involuntarily glanced over to see if her clock was right, and quite often the people of the great house lunched and dined according to the time set for them by the modest Mr. Mains.

Mains believed in sunlight and air as a brain stimulant, and he scheduled his day so as to cater to that belief. At eleven every morning he stopped his work, and at two he was usually before his desk or at his drawing table, ready to begin his afternoon's labor.

To look at Mr. Mains one might think he was a rather well set up stenographer or shoe clerk, or possibly a shipping clerk—or just a clerk. As a matter of fact, he was none of those. Not a single man you might meet from Washington square to Columbus circle would be likely to know who you meant if you mentioned Westly Mains—yet if you asked any reputable architect in New York, he could tell you in a minute. But Mains wasn't an architect, either.

In a few of the houses on upper Fifth avenue and Riverside drive might be found a room that contained some such furniture as could only be produced by an artist with a constructive genius for the application of art to utility. And underneath somewhere on each table or chair, you might find burned with a close pressed red-hot iron this simple legend: "Mains-Made."

Many an unscrupulous imitator has branded his own things in the same manner, but all to no purpose, for in each one of the Mains designs there is an identification mark, some trick in the design or some piece inlaid in the making, known only to Mains and recorded in the little book that lies in a certain safety deposit vault. So the Mains-Made things are made on the integrity of Mains, and are, and will be for a long time to come the highest achievement of art in furniture.

At eleven o'clock on a certain morning the young mistress of the great house at the corner hanged up the receiver of her telephone on its hook and stamped her foot angrily. She had just been in conversation with her architect, and as a consequence, she was disgruntled and disappointed beyond measure. It seemed that although her new summer home out on Long Island would be completed within the time specified, there was one thing which the architect had been unable to do. She had set her heart on a Mains-Made dining room set, and Mr. Mains had refused to take the job, for he had no more capacity of his shop to accept his taking any more work for the present year.

"That is the worst," she exclaimed, the capacity of his shop? declared Irene Wedgewood, severely.

"Simply because he doesn't want to," said her architect.

"Offer him double money," she urged.

"I did," said the architect, "but money means nothing to Mains."

"Perhaps if I see him," she suggested, with visions of her past success as a persuader of men.

"You might succeed," conceded the architect wearily, "but I doubt it."

So a few moments later the imperious Miss Wedgewood sailed down the steps of the great house. At this moment, however, the mind of Mr. Mains was on other things, and his belated effort to dodge the young woman who came charging out of the gate with head down was a trifle too late.

"I—I beg your pardon," Irene Wedgewood had the grace to say. "I—I wasn't looking where I was going."

"I'm entirely uninjured," smiled Mains, amusedly, looking down into her anger-clouded eyes. "Somebody's going to catch it," he grinned to himself humorously, as he passed on. "From that spoiled darling of the rich."

And Miss Wedgewood's temper was not soothed by the little Jap servant who informed her that Mains would not be in until two o'clock. It was an outrage. It was his business to be in. However, she was determined to see him, and she went back promptly at two o'clock.

It was said of Mains that nothing could surprise him, but he was surprised when Irene Wedgewood was ushered into his studio that afternoon.

"Why—why," she caught herself saying, "you're the man I ran down this morning."

"And you were terribly angry when you did it," laughed Mains.

Irene Wedgewood smiled up into Mains' eyes, engagingly. "I've come to—to persuade you, Mr. Mains, to persuade you to—to reconsider, and undertake the furniture for my music room. I'm Irene Wedgewood, and Mr. Howard Colby is my architect."

"Yes, Colby spoke of that yesterday," said Mains. "Awfully sorry, you know, but I don't operate a furniture factory, Miss Wedgewood—just a little shop down below Eighth avenue. I only employ twenty men, although they're the highest paid artisans in the world. I'm sure you understand that if I do not restrict my output its value will deteriorate. I really cannot undertake any more work for a long time."

But she was paying little attention to what he was saying as she moved about the room eagerly touching this piece and that, wondering and exclaiming over the loveliness of his things.

"And you made them all?" she asked.

"Yes, most of these are originals: made by my own hands," he smiled. "I have other things here. Would you like to see them?"

"To love to," said the once haughty Miss Wedgewood.

And he led her down the hall where there were other rooms containing odds and ends of Mains-Made things. But just then came a man who must be seen, and Mains excused himself and left her to roam about as she chose. Ten minutes later he returned, to find her in the back room, where was the orangewood boudoir set. She had flung her hat away and was sitting before the dressing table where the afternoon sun streamed through the window.

Mains was startled to see her there, for he usually kept this room locked. These things were sacred to Mains, and not for the eyes of the casual observer, but when he caught the picture of her there as her regal young head dropped slightly under the weight of the halo of her pale bright hair, he stopped in the doorway.

"You are the first woman," he said, softly, "who has ever looked on these things."

"Oh, I'm sorry," she glanced up startled, and arose contritely. "They—they are the loveliest things I've ever seen."

"Yes," he said, looking down into her eyes. "I wanted them to be. For seven years I've been making them, bit by bit, in my little shop upstairs—making them, you know, for the dream girl who might some day be foolish enough to—love me." He smiled wistfully.

"She would have—have to be a very wonderful dream-girl to be worthy of—of such thoughtfulness and—sense of beauty," said Irene Wedgewood, as she stepped hesitantly past him into the hall. And a few moments later she left, the original intention of her visit to Mains completely forgotten.

Two months later when Irene Wedgewood went out to superintend the arrangement of the furnishings of her new house, she found a certain orangewood boudoir set already unpacked in the room adjoining her bedroom. For an instant she held her hands over her surprised eyes and then looked again. Star-eyed and with flaming cheeks she went to the telephone, before which she sat for some moments in deep thought, then suddenly she changed her mind, for she slipped into her coat and drove her car furiously back to town.

At five that afternoon she entered Mains' studio rather breathlessly.

"Tre come," murmured she the once imperious Miss Wedgewood, "to pay for—the boudoir set."

Mains smiled down into her eyes, standing close. "It was a fancy of mine to send it. You were the first woman to see it, and—so were entitled to have it. Its value is—entirely other than financial—so you see, money cannot pay for it."

"I—I didn't mean money," a tear slipped down her cheek. "I thought—I might be the—the dream girl—and—and pay for it with—love." She stood there with bowed head and warm, flushed cheeks.

Whereat Mains reached out and gently cuddled her to his heart, collecting his first payment promptly. And the present Mrs. Mains will tell you any time that Mains-Made happiness is even more wonderful than Mains-Made furniture.

First Fireplaces.

The earliest fireplaces had no grates and the fire instead of extending up into a chimney merely terminated in a narrow slit which was cut through the wall not far above the fireplace. These fireplaces were far from being things of comfort. At the beginning of the seventeenth century investigators began to realize that most of the heat went up the chimney, and attempts were made to conserve it by building air passages on either side of the chimney. From this gradually developed the idea of our present-day radiators.

Crystals of Vitality Save Lives.

About ten years ago a Japanese researcher, Takamine, in the laboratory of Columbia university, made the discovery that a certain substance, secreted by a gland of the ox or sheep, when injected into the blood of other animals, had the power of greatly increasing their blood pressure and consequently their vitality. He called this substance adrenalin and succeeded in refining it to light yellow crystals. When the suprarenal glands which secrete this substance were removed by an operation from the living animals, they invariably died, showing that it was necessary to the life of the animals. However, only small quantities are needed by the animal, and hence but little is secreted by the glands, and then only in very weak condition, being mixed with other substances. The crystals are pure and have extremely great power. One part of the adrenalin dissolved in 100,000 parts of water is strong and capable of performing miracles. In fact, one-half thimbleful, or about that much, has been used in hospitals all over the country, time and time again, to enable a man to pass a crisis when his natural strength would have failed him. Hundreds of men and women can thank adrenalin for their lives.

Makes for Smooth Existence.

There is a good deal said about the loss of individuality, a loss when real which we all deplore, but a man is more likely to keep his individuality, with his life, if he follows in his motor the formulated lines of traffic rather than meet another man in his motor on the wrong side of the road. If both men happened to be in a civic parade there would be no loss of individuality to the man who kept his place behind instead of driving out from his place in order to get farther ahead of the man behind him, or in order to slip in ahead of the one ahead of him. Keeping in line means a simple thing often, but it is one of the trifles that make for a perfectly smooth existence.

There are seeming restrictions in life that hamper, but there are a great many others that forward. It is easy to understand the gains when compliance of a purely mechanical sort—but very necessary—has been made. By reasoning from their analogy we may find out to our advantage that there are many others less tangible, a compliance with which would do wonders in making the world go round, and in making ourselves the happiest and most successful people.
